“Janice Marie Outlaw Hendrix, my beloved aunt, holds a special place in my heart that will forever overflow with love and adoration. Visiting Aunt Janny and her dear husband Uncle Rondell (J.R.) at their home was a cherished experience. Countless treasured memories weave through the fabric of my mind, forming a tapestry of joy. It was within the embrace of their presence that I discovered my passion for horseback riding, as they introduced me to the wonders of equestrian adventures. The gifts they bestowed upon me, like a stunning necklace at the tender age of six, a whimsical red and white toy dog, and a cowgirl hat for my horse show escapades, remain carefully preserved, each possessing an extraordinary ability to transport me back in time, rekindling the magic of yesteryears. With the demands of my profession leading me to reside in a bustling city, the physical distance could not diminish the bond I share with my Outlaw family. The threads of affection woven between my aunts and uncles and me form an unbreakable tapestry of closeness, and I hold their endearing words close to my heart. They, without fail, considered me not merely their niece, but their precious baby sister. Today, as I mourn the passing of Aunt Janice, I am reminded that she joins my five other aunts in the embrace of Heaven. The void they leave behind is immeasurable, yet I find solace in the belief that one day, we shall be reunited in a joyous celestial gathering. In the eternal realm, Aunt Janice finds boundless happiness, gracefully reunited with her loving parents, John Outlaw and Ola Sargent Outlaw, as well as her cherished sisters Louise, Lula Mae, and Gaynell. Surrounded by grandparents, aunts, and uncles, her spirit rejoices in a heavenly homecoming. As those of us left behind grapple with the shadows cast by her absence, we must acknowledge that our collective lives have dimmed in her absence. For what we truly miss when a loved one departs is not merely their physical presence, but the unique lens through which they beheld us, the depths of their love, and the essence of who we were in their eyes. No one else can truly perceive us as that cherished individual did. My soul aches at the thought of never again witnessing the radiance of Aunt Janny's smile directed towards me. No other smile can illuminate my world quite like hers. But as I stand here, in a moment marked by bittersweet farewells, I find solace in knowing that her spirit will forever accompany me. Through memories etched upon the very core of my being, her love will reverberate, and her smile will continue to grace my heart, captivating me with its enduring warmth.
